Kantishna Hills (Unit 64)

Woodland spruce, stunted spruce, low shrub willow and birch communities. Valuable wildlife habitat. Includes one recent fire scar. Moose Creek, which runs the length of this unit's western boundary, is anadromous. Wolf dens. Many raptor sites. Glacier city contains historic mining sites and is eligible for inclusion in NRHP. Other mining-related structures and archeological sites scattered throughout southern part of unit. There are 14 cabins, and there are winter trails.

Receives little human use. Good opportunities for solitude and a variety of recreational activities. Wilderness character good in summer with the exception of the southernmost end which may experience higher use levels from day use originating from Kantishna-based lodges. In winter, occasional noise from snowmachines degrades wilderness character.
